CATALOGUE OF COLLECTIONS, NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

INTRODUCTION

The National Gallery of Art, which is the legal depository of all objects of art belonging to the nation not acquired for other definite purposes, and heretofore administered in connection with the National Museum, became the seventh separate administrative branch under the Institution on July 1, 1920, the Sixty-sixth Congress having provided in the sundry civil act "for the administration of the National Gallery of Art by the Smithsonian Institution, including compensation of necessary employees and necessary incidental expenses." The gallery has now an organization of its own and a modest staff which will enable it to lay the foundation for development along lines corresponding in character with those of the art institutions of other enlightened nations.[1]

A full account of the inception of the art activities of the Institution and of the early struggles of the incipient gallery of art prepared by the late assistant secretary of the Institution, Dr. Richard Rathbun, is given in Bulletin 70 of the National Museum. The first edition of that bulletin was published in 1909, and this was followed by a revised edition in 1916. The collections embodied in that publication include, beside the various paintings, sculptures, and other art works formally assigned to the gallery, a wide range of exhibits belonging to the Institution and the National Museum which are regarded as properly affiliating with the fine arts rather than with history or anthropology. It includes also an account of the Freer collections, which were held until 1920 in Detroit awaiting the completion of the building provided by the donor for their reception in Washington.

[1] The Freer Gallery of Art, which is, by the terms of the gift, a distinct unit of the National Gallery of Art under the Smithsonian Institution, to stand forever as such, occupies a superb structure provided for it by the donor, the late Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, and designed by Charles A. Platt, architect. The gallery is administered by a staff separate from that of the National Gallery proper, and provided for by the Freer bequest.

The present catalogue, the second to be issued by the National Gallery as a separately organized branch of the Smithsonian Institution, is intended as a simple catalogue embodying only such of the national art collections as have been definitely assigned to the gallery. Aside from the numerous paintings and works of sculpture, which constitute the bulk of the exhibition series, there are included numerous art objects of other classes which have accrued to the gallery as integral parts of gifts and bequests of art works in past years. It includes also a list of such loans of art works as are now accorded a place among the exhibits of the gallery.

The credit of taking the initial step in the establishment of a museum and gallery of art in Washington must be given to an humble citizen named Varden, who began collecting exhibits of various kinds in 1829, or soon thereafter, his meager gallery being first known as "The John Varden Museum" and later as "The Washington Museum, John Varden, proprietor." The collection included, aside from objects of natural history, a number of works of art, the catalogue enumerating 32 of the latter by title. Of these, however, only two preserved to our time can be identified. They are: Portrait of Cardinal Mazarin, and "Massacre of the Innocents," works of no present value due to their advanced state of obliteration. In 1841 the collection was transferred to the keeping of the society known as "The National Institution for the Promotion of Science."

The National Institution, founded by citizens of Washington in 1840, was incorporated as the National Institute in 1842. Its purpose was to promote science, the collection, preservation, and display of specimens of natural history, etc., and later the fine arts were regarded as within the scope of the enterprise. The act of incorporation provided that on dissolution of the society all its possessions should become the property of the United States. The first president was the Hon. Joel R. Poinsett, Secretary of War, and the membership at one time numbered upward of 1,000. In 1862 its charter expired, and the collections along with those of the Varden collection were transferred to the Smithsonian Institution. For a number of years these collections were associated with the limited Government collections in the United States Patent Office, the latter, however, having been turned over to the Smithsonian Institution in 1860.

Owing to the destruction by fire in 1865 of the records of collections transferred by the Institute, a limited number only of the works of art now recorded in the gallery can with certainty be traced to the Institute.

The Smithsonian Institution was established by Congress in 1846 through a fund bequeathed to the United States by James Smithson and was organized under the control of a board of regents. By the act of Congress of the United States approved August 10, 1846, establishing the Smithsonian Institution, it was provided:

"That, so soon as the Board of Regents shall have selected the said site (for a building), they shall cause to be erected a suitable building, of plain and durable materials and structure, without unnecessary ornament, and of sufficient size, and with suitable rooms or halls, for the reception and arrangement, upon a liberal scale, of objects of natural history, including a geological and mineralogical cabinet; also a chemical laboratory, a library, a gallery of art, and the necessary lecture rooms," etc.

Immediately upon the organization of the Board of Regents, in September, 1846, a committee from its membership was appointed to digest a plan for carrying out the provisions of this act. The committee's report, submitted on January 25, 1847, contained the following recommendations on the subject of the fine arts:

"The gallery of art, your committee think, should include both paintings and sculpture, as well as engravings and architectural designs; and it is desirable to have in connexion with it one or more studios, in which young artists might copy without interruption, being admitted under such regulations as the board may prescribe. Your committee also think that as the collection of paintings and sculpture will probably accumulate slowly, the room destined for a gallery of art might properly and usefully meanwhile be occupied during the session of Congress as an exhibition room for the works of artists generally; and the extent and general usefulness of such an exhibition might probably be increased, if an arrangement could be effected with the Academy of Design, the Arts Union, the Artists' Fund Society, and other associations of similar character, so as to concentrate at the Metropolis, for a certain portion of each winter, the best results of talent in the fine arts."

The Smithsonian Building was completed in 1855 and for many years served to accommodate the collections of all classes. In the early years, however, little progress was made in the acquirement of art works, funds for the purpose being limited.

Serious discouragement to the art interests of the Institution resulted from the disastrous fire of 1865, which burned out the second story of the building, destroying its contents, including a large part of the art collections. The remaining works were later removed, the paintings and statuary to the Corcoran Gallery and the engravings to the Library of Congress. Later they were returned in part to the Institution, but little of importance transpired until 1906, when a collection of paintings was bequeathed to the Corcoran Gallery of Art by Harriet Lane Johnston, mistress of the White House during Buchanan's administration, subject to the condition that should a national gallery be established in Washington they should become the absolute property of that gallery. This led to an inquiry regarding the status of the Institution as the national gallery, and the question was referred to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, which rendered the decision that the Institution is the duly constituted National Gallery of Art. The text of the decision is, in part, as follows:

It is, therefore, on this eleventh day of July, in the year 1906, by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, sitting in Equity, and by the authority thereof, adjudged, ordered and decreed,

That there has been established by the United States of America in the City of Washington a National Art Gallery, within the scope and meaning of that part of the codicil bearing date April 21, 1902, made by the said Harriet Lane Johnston to her Last Will and Testament, in the proceedings in this case mentioned, wherein she gave and bequeathed the pictures, miniatures and other articles, to the Trustees of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, and in the event of the Government establishing in the City of Washington a National Art Gallery, then that the said pictures and other articles above mentioned should be delivered to the said National Art Gallery and become its property; and that the said National Art Gallery is the National Art Gallery established by the United States of America at, and in connection with, the Smithsonian Institution located in the District of Columbia and described in the Act of Congress entitled an Act to establish the "Smithsonian Institution" for the Increase and Diffusion of Knowledge among men, approved August 10, 1846, 9 Stat. L. 103 (Title LXXIII, Section 5579 R. S. U. S.) and the subsequent Acts of Congress amendatory thereof; and it is further adjudged, ordered and decreed, that the United States of America is entitled to demand and receive from the surviving Executors of the said Harriet Lane Johnston, the Complainants named in the Bill of Complaint in this case, all of the above mentioned pictures, articles of sculpture, engravings, miniatures and other articles, the same to be and become a part of the said National Art Gallery so established by the United States of America at, and in connection with, the said Smithsonian Institution.

* * * WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.

The collection was therefore assigned to the Institution. Since that time the national collections have increased rapidly, chiefly through gifts and bequests of art works. Among these may be mentioned the William T. Evans collection, comprising 150 paintings, regarded as one of the choicest collections of contemporary American paintings existing, 1 fire etching, 1 bronze bust, and proofs of 115 engravings on wood; a collection of 82 paintings and drawings of varied subject matter, executed by French artists and presented to the American people by citizens of the French Republic in appreciation of the assistance rendered by American citizens in alleviating the distress caused by the war with Germany; a rare and exceedingly valuable collection of 24 paintings by 19 European old masters presented by Ralph Cross Johnson, of Washington; the Eddy bequest, (to be known as "The A. R. and M. H. Eddy Donation"), comprising paintings, ivory carvings, miniatures, and various other objects of art; and a full-length statue in marble of William Pitt, presented by the Duchess of Marlborough and other American ladies residing in London; the several paintings provided by the Henry Ward Ranger bequest; 2 important sculptures by Mrs. Benjamin H. Warder; a collection of 22 World War portraits by the National Art Committee; the gift of a collection of Civil War portraits by Walter Beck; the A. D. Pell collection of valuable art objects of numerous classes; and the gift of 2 important marbles by the estate of Henry Cabot Lodge. These and other less important accessions of art works, together with previous accessions, are, with a few exceptions, now installed in the central skylighted hall of the Natural History Building, which had been subdivided into a number of rooms, as at present, for their reception.

It is a noteworthy fact that until the beginning of the fiscal year 1920–21 no provision had been made for the employment of a salaried curator or other employee of the gallery, all works of art accruing to the Institution being associated with the department of anthropology of the National Museum and cared for by the head curator of that department—the present Director.

It is to be noted further that, when Bulletin 70 of the National Museum series was written, the art collections of the Institution had not been definitely segregated, and when the gallery was organized as a separate administrative unit, July 1, 1920, it was found that certain of the collections of art objects and various individual works listed in that publication were not of a character to warrant their assignment to the gallery. They are thus retained in the Museum

Although works of painting and sculpture are given particular prominence in the gallery as at present constituted, it is anticipated that from necessity the gallery will in due course assume the character of a museum of art, since important gifts and bequests of works of the fine arts include works of taste in all branches in which manifestations of taste appear. This broadening of the field is shadowed forth in the organization of the National Gallery Commission, appointed by the regents of the Institution June 8, 1921, and including in its membership five public men interested in the fine arts, five experts in the fine arts, and five artists. The functions of the commission are to promote the administration, development, and utilization of the National Gallery. Among the several features of the organization are an advisory committee on acceptance of works of art and committees on architecture, sculpture, ceramics, textiles, American paintings, European paintings, ancient and modern, mural paintings, prints, and oriental art.

Fortunately during the year 1916 certain definite provision for the increase of the collection was made through private benefaction. The will of the late Henry Ward Ranger provided a fund, to be administered by the National Academy of Design, the income of which should be devoted to the purchase of works of art for the National Gallery. The provision is as follows:

"All pictures so purchased are to be given by the council (of the Academy) to art institutions in America, or to any library or other institution in America maintaining a gallery open to the public, all such gifts to be upon the express condition that the National Gallery at Washington, administered by the Smithsonian Institute, shall have the option and right, without cost, to take, reclaim, and own any picture for their collection, provided they exercise such option and right at any time during the five-year period beginning 10 years after the artist's death and ending 15 years after his death, and if such option and right is not exercised during such period, the picture shall remain and be the property of the institution to which it was first given."

It will be seen that this remarkable arrangement prolongs the final acquirement of works assigned to institutions other than the National Gallery to very indefinite periods.

At the present writing, 1925, three important paintings have been definitely added to the National Gallery through this arrangement, and 48 others assigned to other galleries are subject to demand by the gallery as provided in the bequest.

A second agency of primary importance to the gallery and to national art generally is found in the organization and activities of the National Art Committee. In January, 1919, it became evident to several lovers of American art that if the United States was to have a pictorial record of the World War it would be necessary immediately to take steps directed toward that end. A number of the distinguished leaders of America and of the allied nations were approached and their consent obtained for the painting of their portraits by prominent American artists. With the indorsement of the Smithsonian Institution as custodian of the National Gallery of Art, the American Federation of Arts and the American Mission to Negotiate Peace, then in session in Paris, the National Art Committee came into being for the purpose of carrying out this idea, thus initiating and establishing at Washington a national portrait gallery. The members of the committee as organized are Hon. Henry White, chairman; Herbert L. Pratt, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. W. H. Crocker, Robert W. deForest, Abram Garfield, Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Arthur W. Meeker, J. Pierpont Morgan, Charles P. Taft, Henry C. Frick, and Charles D. Walcott.

That the gift of these paintings to the National Gallery might be thoroughly national in character, it was decided that a group of these portraits, financed by the art patrons of any city, would be inscribed as presented to the National Gallery by that city and that a representative of that city should become an honorary member of the National Art Committee. It was further decided that a tablet or other permanent record in the National Portrait Gallery should bear the names of the members of the National Art Committee, including the chairmen of all local committees, and that there should be a record of the name of each subscriber to the purchase fund.

Twenty portraits completed under the above arrangement were exhibited in the National Gallery during the month of May, 1921, and these, with others subsequently completed, were shown in a number of cities before permanent installation in Washington. The collection was circulated under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts. The portraits exhibited are as follows:

By Cecilia Beaux:
- Admiral Sir David Beatty.
- Premier Georges Clemenceau.
- Cardinal Desiré Joseph Mercier.

By Joseph De Camp:
- Premier Sir Robert Laird Borden.
- General Sir Arthur William Currie.

By Charles Hopkinson:
- Premier Joan J. C. Bratiano.
- Premier Nikola Pashich.
- Prince Kimmochi Saionji.

By John C. Johansen:
- Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig.
- Marshal Joseph Joffre.
- General Amando Diaz.
- Premier Vittorio Emanuele Orlando.
- "Signing of the Peace Treaty, June 28, 1919."

By Edmund C. Tarbell:
- Marshal Ferdinand Foch.
- General Georges Leman.
- Woodrow Wilson.

By Douglas Volk:
- His Majesty Albert I, King of the Belgians.
- Premier David Lloyd George.
- General John Joseph Pershing.

By Irving R. Wiles:
- Admiral William Snowden Sims.

The portraits added, in accordance with the plan of the Committee, are:

By Edmund C. Tarbell:
- Herbert Clark Hoover.

By Jean McLane:
- Her Majesty Elizabeth, Queen of the Belgians.

The very extensive collection presented and in part bequeathed by the Rev. Alfred Duane Pell, D. D., and which is not as yet fully received and recorded, includes a wide range of art works largely within the fields of furniture, ceramics, and metal work. Its acceptance and installation signalizes the purpose of the Institution to extend the gallery's field of activities to every branch of art in which taste is an important factor.

In the gallery the several accession units are as far as possible kept together, but on account of frequent changes in adjusting the collections to the available spaces the catalogue can not be made to indicate the placement of particular accessions or of individual works.

It should be added that the catalogue is intended to include only such of the diversified collections as the visitor to the gallery may reasonably expect to find on view or that otherwise are readily accessible. A list of works lent to the gallery for the purpose of exhibition is appended to the catalogue.

To facilitate the task of locating particular collections or the works of particular artists, alphabetical lists of these, with page references, are given on pages 13 to 23. In the catalogue the biographies of artists are given in brief form, the purpose being merely to clearly identify the subject. Fuller biographies are available in various cyclopedias and other publications.

The value of the National Gallery collections already in hand, aside from the Freer Collection, is estimated at several millions, their acquirement being due almost entirely to the generous attitude of American citizens toward the Smithsonian Institution, no single work of painting or sculpture now in its possession having been acquired by purchase. It can hardly be doubted that, when a building is provided in which contributions can be cared for and presented to the public in the manner they deserve, many collectors seeking a permanent home for their treasures will welcome the opportunity of placing them in the custody of the national institution. The provision of a suitable building for the gallery is all that is necessary to make Washington in the years to come an art center fully worthy of the Nation.

In 1923 Congress set aside a suitable space in the park between the new National Museum and Seventh Street for a gallery building, stipulating, however, that the Institution should provide the funds required for its erection. In 1924 the sum of $10,000 was obtained by the regents of the Institution by private subscription for the preparation of plans, and Mr. Charles A. Platt was selected for this important task. In January, 1925, preliminary plans were submitted and accepted by the board of regents. The ground plan of the main floor and the front elevation are shown in the accompanying illustrations.

Situated just east of the new National Museum, and facing the Mall on the north, the Gallery will harmonize in general effect with that building. It is to be constructed of granite, to be 560 feet in length and 300 feet in depth, is to be three stories in height, and in the Renaissance style. The sketch plans embody every essential feature of a comprehensive art museum as determined by an exhaustive study by Mr. Platt of the principal art museums of Europe and America. The building is planned to serve not only as a repository for the art collections at present belonging to the Nation, now partly exhibited in the National Museum, but for the assemblage and display of the highest manifestations of the arts of taste in every branch and of every people.

The recent introduction in the United States Senate by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of an amendment to the deficiency appropriations bill providing for a gallery building gives gratifying assurance of the awakening of public interest in national art. The amendment offered is as follows:

> To enable the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution to commence the erection of a suitable fireproof building with granite fronts for the National Gallery of Art, including the National Portrait Gallery and the history collections of the United States National Museum, on the north side of the Mall between the Natural History Building and Seventh Street, $2,500,000: Provided, That the total cost of said building complete, including heating and ventilation apparatus and elevators, shall not exceed $7,000,000.

46563—26†——2

The devotion of the contemplated building to both art and American history, as provided in this proposed amendment, strengthens the appeal for immediate erection of the building, since the history collections now occupy upwards of 200,000 square feet of floor space in the Smithsonian buildings, much to the detriment of the scientific departments of the Institution.

[1] The method of grouping by accessions is adopted in order that the several gifts, bequests, and transfers may appear as complete units, thus giving definite credit to the generous patrons of the gallery. The number of the contributions from a single source ranges from 1, as in the case of the Herbert Adams gift, to 152, as in the case of the William T. Evans collection.

[2] N. A., National Academy of Design; A. N. A., Associate, National Academy of Design.

[3] The biographical sketches are brief, aiming to do little more than to clearly identify the subjects.

[4] The dimensions of paintings in this catalogue are given in inches, the figure named first indicating the height, the other the width of the canvas.

8. DRUMMER BOY OF THE FIGHTING FIFTH AFTER GAINES MILLS

Robert F. Daly, New York City, was a drummer boy and had seen 17 battles before he was 13. He endeared himself to his regiment, the First Duryée Zouaves, especially at Gaines Mills, where he carried water to the men fighting from a spring more than a mile to the rear. On the seven-day retreat to the ships the men carried the boy on their shoulders. When the regiment returned to New York, the boy's father discovered him in line, snatched him from the march, and sent him back to school.

Size: 41 x 33½

9. THE SIGNAL (After the Battle of Big Bethel. John Tregaskis, Brooklyn, N. Y., Fifth New York Volunteer Infantry, Duryée Zouaves)

After the Battle of Big Bethel the Union forces were marching by parallel roads in pursuit of the enemy. During the night at the crossroads they fired at each other. To avoid a repetition of the error they used the white of their turbans around their arms as a signal.

Size: 31 x 31

10. THE FIRST SHARPS RIFLE (Homer D. Jennings, St. Cloud, Fla.)

The Sharps rifle was used for the first time before Gaines Mills, Va. It was a repeating rifle and was used by the Fifth New York Volunteer Infantry, Duryée Zouaves. There were just enough of the rifles to arm the end men of companies, but the effect upon the opposing forces was bewildering and disastrous. General Sykes was in command.

Size: 40 x 32½

EVANS, WILLIAM THOMAS—GIFT OF

(152 numbers)

In March, 1907, Mr. William T. Evans, of Montclair, N. J., announced his intention to contribute to the National Gallery of Art a number of paintings by contemporary American artists of established reputation. Forty-three were received on April 2 and seven others a little later. Owing to lack of available space in the National Museum, they were installed temporarily in the Corcoran Gallery. Additions were made at intervals and the completed gift comprises 150 paintings and 1 fire etching (representing 106 American artists), 1 bronze bust, and 115 examples of the work of 16 of the foremost American wood engravers (Victor Bernstrom, William Baxter Palmer Closson, Timothy Cole, John P. Davis, Frank French, T. Johnson, F. S. King, Elbridge Kingsley, G. Kruell, R. A. Muller, C. A. Powell, S. G. Putnam, John Tinkey, F. H. Wellington, Henry Wolf, and Fred Yuengling). The latter have been assigned to the Division of Graphic Arts, U. S. National Museum. In March, 1910, the entire collection, with the exception of the wood engravings, was transferred to the central skylight gallery of the Natural History Museum. The collection is regarded as one of the most representative collections of contemporary American paintings at present existing.

THE CUP OF DEATH BY ELIHU VEDDER

William T. Evans Collection

Mr. Evans, of Welsh-Irish ancestry, was born at Clough Jordan, Ireland, in 1843, and was brought to America by his parents when a year old. He graduated at the New York Free Academy, studied architecture for two years, and later adopted a business career in which he had marked success. His taste for art developed early, and in his purchases, which were extensive, he favored especially American painters. He did more perhaps than any other collector to promote interest in American art, and to his liberal patronage many of our leading artists of to-day owe their first step toward success. His death occurred November 25, 1918.

JOHNSON, RALPH CROSS—GIFT OF

(Twenty-four numbers)

On June 19, 1919, Mr. Ralph Cross Johnson, formerly of Washington City, presented to the National Gallery of Art the 24 paintings by leading European old masters comprised in this collection. Mr. Johnson, a native of Maine, was a graduate of Harvard College and also of the Harvard Law School. He was admitted to the bar both in the State of Maine and in the District of Columbia. He died at Belfast, Me., July 9, 1923.

Mr. Johnson made numerous visits to Europe and studied with discriminating care the art treasures of England, France, Germany, Russia, Italy, and Spain. His collection, from which these examples are drawn, was obtained very gradually and only as the favorable occasion presented itself. Some were obtained in London, others in Paris, but the majority were acquired in New York, where in many cases he was so fortunate as to have the first selection from important consignments of works of the masters arriving from London and Paris. Few of the works here recorded have been seen in public exhibitions prior to their installation in the National Gallery.

COX, David

1783–1859. Born and died near Birmingham, England. British School. Spent his life wandering over England and Wales, painting landscapes, characterized by realistic fidelity and great beauty.

1. LANDSCAPE: OUTSKIRTS OF A WOOD

Size: 28 x 36½

FLINCK, Govaert

1615–1660. Born at Cleves, Prussia; died at Amsterdam, Holland. Dutch School. Pupil of Rembrandt, but later studied the Italian masters and modeled his style on them.

2. MADONNA AND CHILD

Size: 31 x 26½

FRANCIA, Giacomo

1486–1557. Bolognese School. Most talented of the sons of Francesco Francia. Works owned largely in Bologna.

3. THE MYSTIC MARRIAGE OF ST. CATHERINE OF ALEXANDRIA

Size: 26 x 21½

MADONNA AND CHILD — BY BERNARDINO LUINI

HARRIET LANE JOHNSTON COLLECTION

GAINSBOROUGH, Thomas

1727–1788. Born at Sudbury, Suffolk; died in London. British School. Practiced his art mostly in Bath and London, where his portraits rivaled in popularity those of Reynolds. The real founder of English landscape.

4. A FAMILY AT THE COTTAGE DOOR

Size: 58¾ x 48

5. LORD MULGRAVE, IN NAVAL UNIFORM

Size: 50 x 60

GUARDI, Francesco

1712–1793. Born and died in Venice. Venetian School. Pupil of Canaletto; devoted himself chiefly to painting views of Venice.

6. RUINS AND FIGURES

Size: 41 x 49

7. VIEW IN ROME, WITH THE CHURCH OF ARA COELI

Size: 28½ x 43¼

HOGARTH, William

1697–1764. Born and died in London. British School. Best known by his series of pictures satirizing the vices of his time and by his portraits.

8. PORTRAIT OF MRS. PRICE

Size: 31 x 26

LAWRENCE, Sir Thomas

1769–1830. Born at Bristol; died in London. British School. The last of the great English portrait painters of the eighteenth century. Though reared in poverty, he attained distinction even as a boy, and became the favorite of George III and George IV, who secured him many commissions. He was admitted to the Royal Academy before the age required by its rules, and became its president in 1820. Knighted in 1815.

9. PORTRAIT OF LORD ABERCORN

Size: 36 x 28

10. PORTRAIT OF MRS. TOWRY

Size: 30¾ x 25

LOTTO, Lorenzo

1480–1554. Born at Bergamo, but painted mostly in Venice. Venetian School. Successively influenced by Palma Vecchio, Giorgione, and Titian.

11. A VENETIAN SENATOR

Size: 27½ x 21½

MAES, Nicholaes

1632–1693. Born at Dordrecht; died at Amsterdam. Dutch School. Portrait and genre painter; pupil of Rembrandt, but later influenced by Jordaens and the Antwerp masters.

12. A BURGOMASTER

Size: 35½ x 28

MAINARDI, Sebastiano

Born at Gimignano; died in 1513. Florentine School. Pupil and brother-in-law of Domenico Ghirlandajo.

13. MADONNA AND CHILD, WITH ST. JOHN AND AN ANGEL

Size: Circular; 24 in. diam.

ORLEY, Bernard van

1493–1542. Born and died in Brussels. Flemish School. Spent several years in Rome prior to 1515, studying Raphael; perhaps his pupil.

14. THE VIRGIN AND CHILD

Size: 38 x 31

RAEBURN, Sir Henry

1756–1823. Born near Edinburgh, where he died. British School. His youth was spent in poverty, but a fortunate marriage brought him an ample fortune, and enabled him to study in Italy for two years. Returning to Edinburgh in 1787, he speedily became the foremost portrait painter of Scotland. President of the Scotch Society of Artists 1812. Knighted in 1822.

15. PORTRAIT OF ARCHIBALD SKIRVING, ESQ.

Size: 30 x 25

REMBRANDT, Van Rijn

1606–1669. Born at Leyden, he spent most of his life at Amsterdam. While he painted with the detailed realism loved by the Dutch, he was very successful; but when he became enamored of chiaroscuro, and painted figures emerging mysteriously from luminous shadows his popularity declined, and he died at Amsterdam in poverty while painting his greatest picture.

16. PORTRAIT OF A MAN WEARING A LARGE HAT

Size: 42 x 33½

BUST OF HARRIET LANE JOHNSTON BY WILLIAM HENRY RINEHART

HARRIET LANE JOHNSTON COLLECTION

REYNOLDS, Sir Joshua

1723–1792. Born at Plympton Earl, in Devonshire; died in London, where most of his life was passed. British School. Spent more than two years in Italy (1749–1752) studying the great Italian masters, who greatly influenced his style. On the establishment of the Royal Academy, in 1768, he was chosen its first president and was knighted, and in 1784 became principal painter to the King. A man of great culture and dignity, he did much to raise his profession in the eyes of Englishmen.

17. THE DUCHESS OF ANCASTER

Size: 25 x 21

18. PORTRAIT OF VISCOUNT HILL

Size: 25½ x 21½

ROMNEY, George

1734–1802. Born in Dalton-in-Furness, Lancashire; died in Kendall, Westmoreland. British School. In 1773 he visited Italy, where he remained for two years. Returning to England he settled in London, becoming the rival of Reynolds and Gainsborough as a portrait painter.

19. PORTRAIT OF SIR SAMPSON WRIGHT

Size: 30 x 25

RUBENS, Peter Paul

1577–1640. Flemish School. Studied at Antwerp under various masters until 1600. Went to Italy and became court painter to the Duke of Mantua. Returned to Antwerp in 1608, where, save for diplomatic missions to Spain and England, he continued to reside until his death. Knighted by Charles I.

20. THE HOLY FAMILY, WITH ST. ELIZABETH

Size: 50 x 46

TITIAN, or TIZIANO, Vercelli

1477–1576. Born in Pieve di Cadore among the Dolomites. Venetian School. Pupil of Giovanni Bellini, but more influenced by his fellow pupil Giorgione. Passed his life at Venice save when visiting the Emperor, the Pope, or his native town. He lived like a prince and was treated by princes with rare respect.

21. PORTRAIT OF A CARDINAL

Size: 52½ x 39

TURNER, J. M. W.

1775–1851. Born and died in London. England's greatest landscape painter. British School. Beginning with realistic landscape, he passed on to classic landscape in the style of Claude Lorraine, and ended in painting pictures which are essentially visions of light and air.

22. EDINBURGH—A PAINTING OF SUNLIGHT AND AIR

Size: 28 x 36

WILSON, Richard

1713–1782. Born at Pinegas, Montgomeryshire; died at Llanberris, Carnarvonshire. British School. After Claude Lorraine, the most successful master of classic landscape. Spent the years from 1749 to 1755 in Italy, where his style was formed. In his own day he met with scant recognition and suffered great poverty. He is now esteemed one of England's greatest masters.

23. ITALIAN LANDSCAPE, SUNSET GLOW

Size: 24 x 30

24. SUMMER AFTERNOON

Size: 43 x 53½

The portraits of Tyler and Preston were painted on the order of 36 subscribers, friends of the National Institute. The portrait of Guizot was presented to the United States by American citizens residing in Paris and placed in the National Institute by President Tyler in 1842. It was transferred to the Smithsonian Institution in 1858. (For interesting details see Bulletin 70, U. S. National Museum, pp. 32, 33.)

[1] It is noted that the list of National Institute collections presented in Bulletin 70, U. S. National Museum, 1916 edition, is the original Institute list and includes many numbers never acquired by the Museum, also other numbers condemned as worthless and destroyed in past years, as well as a large number of busts and other works in plaster that have an historical rather than an art interest and are now in storage.

(Eighty-two numbers—Gift of citizens of the French Republic to the people of the United States)

Eighty-two drawings in pencil, pen, charcoal, chalk, crayon, and water color, executed by 82 contemporary French artists, and presented to the people of the United States by citizens of the French Republic as a token of their appreciation of the sympathetic efforts of American citizens toward relieving the distress occasioned by the European war. This notable collection, in which all of the pictures are inscribed and signed by the artists, was received in July, 1915, as a transfer from the Department of State in Washington. The subjects do not relate to the war save in a limited number of instances. These works are uniformly framed and mounted in two especially constructed swinging frames, and at present, 1925, are exhibited in connection with the great series of paintings of war subjects executed by American artists for the Victory Liberty loan celebration in New York, April–May, 1919, and presented to the Nation by the artists. In the same connection is shown the remarkable collection of sketches, drawings in color, and paintings in oil and water color executed by American artists of established reputation sent to the seat of war for the purpose.

LOANS

The National Gallery has found it advantageous at times to accept loans of works of art for exhibition purposes, first of important collections comprising a considerable number of works for temporary public display and, second, single works and minor collections of various classes for indefinite gallery utilization. At present, on account of the limited space available for exhibition purposes, loans are not especially desired. Such loans as are now in the custody of the Gallery are included in the following list:[1]
